DATE PREPARED 15 January 1951

1. The Kamenica nad Cirokou (R 49/E 86) military airfield was about 700x 1,500 meters. Its hard and loamy soil was wet when the water-level of the nearby Ciroka River was high. There were two reinforced concrete hangars, each about 20x40 meters, at the field. *
2. A large air force firing range was previously at the field. A military unit was probably stationed there during the period of observation. **

* Comment. The pin-point location of the field was previously reported. The size reported is believed to be correct. The only hangar which existed at the field during the war was still destroyed at the end of 1949. The information that there were two reinforced concrete hangars confirms a previous report that improvement work was being done at the field in the middle of 1950. To date, no details on the improvements have been received.

 Comment. A previous report indicated that the field was used as a firing range by air force troops. No information has been received that the field is actually occupied by air units. According to a previous report, the cadre personnel of the field were allegedly transferred to Trenčin in June 1950.
